

University Senate Minutes

December 14th, 2022
Virtual Meeting

The chair opened the meeting by welcoming everyone in attendance to the last Senate meeting of 2022. The chair began the meeting with the following statement. "I acknowledge with respect the Onondaga Nation, firekeepers of the Haudenosaunee, the indigenous people on whose ancestral lands Syracuse University now stands."

The chair reviewed the meeting agenda and pointed out that the agenda would be slightly different than usual in that the Chancellor and Provost would provide their remarks at the very beginning of the meeting. The chair would report after the Chancellor and Provost. The chair then invited Chancellor Kent Syverud to give his remarks.

Chancellor Remarks

Chancellor Syverud thanked the chair. The Chancellor noted that he and Provost Ritter were joining the meeting from Boise, Idaho. The Chancellor and a small SU team were in Boise for discussions with Micron, which is headquartered in Idaho. The Chancellor noted that the meetings had been very productive. The University's relationships with Micron would be long-term and would cut across many schools, colleges, and units. The meetings are the next stage in creating a clear structure and a way to enable cross-university collaboration with Micron.

The Chancellor stated that the University lost both a student and a trustee since the November Senate meeting. Chancellor Syverud noted that over the weekend of December 10th, he met with the family and attended the Hendricks Chapel memorial service for Bob Sharipov. Sharipov was a junior in Falk College. He was a first-generation student, and an immigrant from Brooklyn, New York. Sharipov was killed in a car accident as he was traveling home for Thanksgiving.

Another Syracuse student traveling with him was seriously injured and was currently hospitalized. The Chancellor stated that he was very grateful to all those in Student Experience and in Falk College who came together to support our students and the Sharipov family. In particular, the Chancellor thanked the students who turned out to speak about Sharipov at the memorial service in the middle of their exams. This meant a great deal to the family.

The Chancellor also announced that today was the funeral for Walter Broadnax, who was one of our most distinguished professors in the Maxwell School and a longtime trustee of the University. Chancellor Syverud shared that he was proud that Broadnax was his friend, and he was very grateful to Dean David Van Slyke, who traveled and spoke at his service, which was held in Washington, D.C.

The Chancellor continued that during the past weekend, the United States Department of Justice took into custody a man who he believed made and placed the bomb that destroyed Pan Am 103 in 1988. The Chancellor called this a significant milestone in a decades-long process to bring those responsible for the bombing to justice. The Chancellor expressed his gratitude to the law enforcement officials in both the United States and Scotland for their relentless work on this project. Chancellor Syverud added that the victims' families, their friends and loved ones have shown tremendous strength and determination in seeking justice for more than three decades. The Chancellor noted that this was very welcome news. He reminded that the annual memorial service marking the December 21st attack would be held in Hendricks Chapel on Wednesday, December 21st. The Chancellor hoped those who could attend, would come and join the memorial.

The Chancellor concluded his remarks by congratulating our student athletes, the coaches, and staff on the men's soccer team, which on Monday won the national championship in a close game against Indiana. He stated that we're proud of their hard work and their success, both on and off the field. The men's soccer team is one of 10 of our athletic teams that had a perfect graduation rate this past year.

Chancellor Syverud thanked everyone for a very full semester and all the hard work throughout the semester. He wished everyone a well-deserved break and especially safe travels over the holidays.

The chair thanked the Chancellor for his remarks and invited Provost Gretchen Ritter to give her remarks.

Provost's Remarks

Provost Ritter thanked the chair and began her remarks by welcoming everyone in attendance. The Provost congratulated everyone on the conclusion of the fall semester. The Provost then provided remarks on the following two topics.

Graduate Student Funding

The Provost began by stating that since her arrival she'd been fortunate to work closely with Graduate Student Organization president, Youssr Dhaouadi, as well as Graduate School dean, Peter Vanable, and other to learn about various support efforts that have been implemented over the past five years.

These efforts include:

- significant enhancements to graduate student health insurance coverage
- addition of nearly $1 million in funding for academic year fellowships
- summer funding
- steady growth in assistantship stipends
- $1.5 million in emergency COVID relief funding

The Provost noted that the progress in these areas is positive. That said, the Provost understands that funding concerns remain, particularly given the rising cost of living. Provost Ritter highlighted two areas of concern that have been elevated as a high priority.

- First, the need to grow our minimum stipend levels for the relatively small subset of programs that provide a lower stipend.
- Second was the need for continued investment in summer funding opportunities.

The Provost stated that with regard to our minimum stipend levels, the current minimum is set at $16,980 for the academic year. Going forward, the minimum stipend for masters students on full-time assistantships will be $20,000. The minimum stipend for PhD students will be elevated to $22,000. The Provost noted that the changes to the minimums will have a larger impact on the subset of masters students than PhD students, many of whom already earn stipends of $22,000 and above.

Provost Ritter continued that in addition to these adjustments, schools and colleges will be expected to increase stipends next year by at least 3% on average, inclusive of increases to the minimum. How the 3% increments is allotted will be left to the discretion of the dean, but their focus will be to address stipend funding needs that they deem to be of the highest priority.

Regarding summer funding, the Graduate School will continue to fund dissemination completion fellowships for up to 30 graduate students who are ABD (all but dissertation). In addition, the Provost renewed the Graduate School's commitment to funding up to 40 pre-dissertation fellowships for the upcoming summer (2023). The pre-dissertation fellowship program was added in the summer of 2021, with COVID relief funding.

The Provost noted that while the pandemic has subsided, the need for supplemental summer funding persists. Awarded to students based on merit and the strength of each applicant's plans for making progress towards degree completion, the Provost views both summer funding plans as an essential component of our commitment to supporting our PhD students.

The Provost addressed one additional area. She stated that to compete for the very best PhD students, our doctoral programs must provide funding assurances such that students in good standing can count on academic year funding to cover the time required to meet their major degree requirements. She added that while the vast majority of our PhD programs already provide this, she has asked that for incoming cohorts, beginning fall 2023, all PhD programs provide at least four years of guaranteed funding through TAs, fellowships, and where appropriate, RA support on grants. Such support, together with a continued focus on growth on assistantship stipends and summer funding opportunities will help to ensure that our PhD programs continue to attract and support outstanding students.

Reflection on the Semester

Provost Ritter stated that as we conclude the semester, she wanted to take the opportunity to express her gratitude to everyone. She noted that it had been a very busy few months, marked by academic strategic planning, deans searches, the announcement of a new chip fabrication plant being built by Micron, as well as teaching, learning, research, and creative work.

She noted that some have described the semester as “intense, ambitious, and robust”. The Provost added that she’d also heard the work undertaken this semester as “productive, fulfilling, and inspiring”. Provost Ritter thanked the over 2,000 students, faculty, and staff who shared their thoughts, reactions, and good ideas as part of the academic strategic planning effort.

The Provost also expressed her gratitude to all of the advisors, residence assistants, instructors, and facilities staff who worked so hard to provide an excellent experience to our large, diverse, and talented first year class.

Provost Ritter went on to express her great appreciation for faculty, staff, students, and Board of Trustee members who are serving on our deans search committees, helping as the university works to find excellent new deans in several schools and colleges.

The Provost thanked everyone in attendance, and everyone else who contribute every day to the university’s mission to education, research, and public impact. Provost Ritter concluded her remarks by wishing everyone and their loved ones a healthy, happy, and restful holiday season.

The chair thanked the Chancellor and Provost for their remarks. She opened the floor for questions and discussion.

Q&A

A senator asked a question regarding a newly proposed program. The senator raised concerns regarding the proposed E-sports major. The senator raised concerns about how the program was put together in what they described as a rushed and haphazard manner. The senator was also concerned about new courses being proposed in the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications. The senator stated that there currently wasn’t an E-sports design job, and the senator believed that the proposed courses were purely speculative. The senator asked why the program has been pushed through in this manner, limiting contemplation and discussion. The senator also raised a concern that the program and its courses have created even more duplication between the Newhouse School and the College of Visual and Performing Arts (VPA).

Provost Ritter responded that she didn't believe that the program had been handled any differently than any other new curriculum program is generally handled. She added that if anything, the program had received a bit more vetting and background than programs often have. The Provost noted that a lot of time was taken to identify national trends in this area. She added that among the things learned from that process was that it is a fast-growing area, and nationally new programs are being set up. Provost Ritter stated that she believed that it was an area that makes sense for Syracuse, in that we are a school that has some excellent programs in sports-related fields. The Provost called attention to the Sports Management and Sport Analytics programs offered through the Falk College of Sport and Human Dynamics, as well as the Sports Journalism in the Newhouse School, and the entertainment-related programs in VPA.

The Provost believed that the faculty and staff from both Newhouse and VPA that have brought the new program forward, had done so with care and consideration, and the program would be a nice match to our strengths overall as a university.

The senator noted that they couldn't comment on the sports management or sports journalism programs, but the senator was skeptical of the visual communications courses and their chances for success. The senator added that game design and studies is a huge industry and e-sports was currently about 5% of that industry. The senator noted their concerns related to design, on which the senator noted their subject expertise, and not understanding the potential career path for students that would go through that track.

Provost Ritter responded that feedback from Hanover and other places noted that there are good opportunities in terms of this area becoming an industry that's attracting a lot of people by way of participants and sponsorships of various kinds. The Provost added that when looked at in the area of sports events, it's becoming an area of opportunity, as well as design becoming a big area of growth. The Provost suggested that any concerns or questions the senator might have should be raised in relation to the curricular approvals that are being brought forward.

The senator noted that they raised their opposition to the courses during the consult process but added that VPA declined to take further issue.

Another senator asked a question of the Provost. The senator thanked the Provost for the careful attention being given to the issue of graduate funding. The senator asked about the dissertation and pre-dissertation fellowships. The senator noted that there are a number of gaps between qualifying for a pre-dissertation and the dissertation fellowships. The senator asked if there could be something small that could come between the two to address the gaps in the process.

Provost Ritter thanked the senator for raising the issue. The Provost noted that there was still work to be done in this area, and she felt that in many ways, they were still getting their hands around understanding the areas that need more attention and how to cover those. The Provost added that in the areas that have opportunities for external funding, she hoped that we would be growing support through that avenue as well.

The Provost stated that the senator and other faculty members could be helpful in providing feedback regarding what their seeing and what needs more attention. The Provost thanked the senator again for raising the issue.

Another senator offered a comment regarding the safe return of the SU administration from Boise. At the conclusion of questions, the chair thanked everyone for their comments and moved on to her report for the Agenda Committee.

Agenda Committee Report

The chair noted that there were two sets of Senate minutes on the agenda for consideration, the October 26th meeting minutes, and the November 16th minutes. The chair asked if there were any questions, concerns, or edits for the minutes.

As there were none, the chair moved to approve the October 26th and November 16th Senate minutes. The vote was taken and the minutes were approved.

The chair then thanked the 80 Senate members who responded to recent Chancellor's Review Survey. She also thanked the committee that worked with her to oversee the survey process.

The chair announced that it was nearly time to hold elections for the Provost's Advisory Committee on Tenure and Promotion. She stated that in mid-January an email would be sent to all tenured and tenure-track faculty from the following units.

- College of Arts and Sciences – Humanities only
- College of Engineering and Computer Science
- Falk College of Sport and Human Dynamics
- S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications
- Martin J. Whitman School of Management
- College of Visual and Performing Arts

The email will explain the process, the role of the committee, and will provide a ballot for each specific electorate. The chair will remind members to vote once the email is sent.

At the conclusion of her remarks, the chair invited the chairs of the Committee on Curricula to present their report.

Committee on Curricula

Senator Carol Faulkner began the report by reviewing the committee's current curriculum numbers for the membership.

The Committee on Curricula's current workload sits at roughly 748 curriculum proposals, with the submission deadline on Friday, December 16th.

|                       | Current Numbers | December Report |
|-----------------------|------------------------|------------------------|
| New courses           | 166                    | 36                     |
| Revised courses       | 301                    | 66                     |
| Course inactivations  | 106                    | 14                     |
| New programs          | 19                     | 4                      |
| Revised programs      | 140                    | 15                     |
| New subjects/prefixes | 3                      | 2                      |

At the end of her overview, Senator Faulkner asked for any questions. As there were none, she moved to approve the Committee on Curricula report in its entirety. The vote was taken and the report was approved.

The chair then moved on to introduce Senator Maureen Thompson to present for the Ad hoc Committee on Shared Competencies.

Ad hoc Committee on Shared Competencies

Senator Thompson began her report by noting that the committee's full report was previously distributed to the Senate membership. Senator Thompson reviewed the committee's timeline from the initial development of the framing language and the individual competencies, through to development of learning outcomes associated with the competencies.

Senator Anne Mosher provided an overview of the course tagging process, beginning with the December 2021 Senate motion to approve tagged courses on an annual basis. Senator Mosher noted that the first batch of tagged courses ready for Senate affirmation was included in the final 17 pages of the committee's full report.

Senator Mosher stated that Senate affirmation of this list would indicate two things. First, that senators played a leading role in the creation of course tagging as a system. Secondly, that senators participated in the review of the course tags that faculty identified, specifically 12 members of the committee, including seven senators, worked in pairs to review each tag application. Senator Mosher reiterated that every tag application had been evaluated by at least one senator according to the following criteria. Instructors of record for undergraduate courses could submit up to three course tag reflections per course, along with their course syllabus. During the review, the committee looked at four areas.

Shared Competencies Course Tag Evaluation Criteria

- Course Learning Objective Alignment
  - Identifies at least one course learning outcome from the syllabus that aligns to the competency for which the course is tagged.
- Assignment Alignment & Weight
  - States the connection between assignment(s) and the specific competency. Assignment(s) weight = 30% of course grade.
- Intentional Instruction
  - Describes at least one instructional strategy faculty employ to teach the specific competency.
- Competency Feedback
  - State feedback tool(s) faculty use to provide general feedback.

Senator Mosher reviewed the submission numbers since March 2021. Senator Mosher noted that 515 faculty and staff submitted 1,453 tag reflections for 838 courses. Of those, the committee approved 1,307 tags as meeting the four established criteria. Senator Mosher reviewed the submission trends across all six competencies.

Senator Mosher thanked those in attendance who had submitted their tag reflections, as well as the ad hoc committee review teams and the Office of Institutional Effectiveness and Assessment for all their hard work on this effort.

Senator Thompson read the committee's motion to the Senate.

The Senate Ad Hoc Committee on Shared Competencies moves that:

The Syracuse University Senate affirms that the course tags listed in the December 2022 Senate Report have been reviewed by the Ad Hoc Committee on Shared Competencies and meet set evaluation criteria.

Senator Thompson asked if there were any questions.

A senator asked a question regarding the motion. The senator asked how a senator can affirm that the course tags met the certain criteria. The senator stated that they could affirm that the courses were reviewed, but they didn't see how they could affirm something that they were not a part of to know for sure that the tagging met the criteria.

The senator also asked a question regarding the assessment as a whole. The senator asked a hypothetical question of how across colleges critical thinking in one site being compared to the critical thinking in another site. The senator asked another question as to how the tags would be used in this first phase of the process.

Senator Mosher responded that it was hoped that senators trusted one another to have done their due diligence. She noted that the senators on the ad hoc committee had been very transparent about the process that was created, working according to the charge that was given to the committee by the Agenda Committee in 2017.

Senator Mosher added that there was an extensive testing and norming process. Senator Mosher stated that the committee has worked in a very rigorous way and they welcome any review of the data. The ad hoc committee has been working under the assumption that a standing committee on accreditation and assessment would have been established and the process would become part of that committee's charge.

The motion for Senate affirmation is a stop gap procedure to make sure that before the tags were published that the Senate was able to see the list, know about the process to approve the tags, and was aware of something about the process behind it. Senator Mosher noted that she hoped that a permanent committee would be in place in the spring.

Senator Mosher responded to the question asked about assessment across colleges, that the committee was in the process of looking at that data. She noted that there are some competencies that are evenly spread throughout the university, and others that are pooled in particular units. Moving forward, when advising students on making sure that they get all of the competencies, different kinds of advice will need to be given. At present, they're trusting their colleagues' assessment of the tagging review process.

As the committee gets more information and additional rubrics are developed, the committee will share additional information. Senator Mosher stated that she was pleased that the Senate is involved in the process, noting that this is a curricular matter, and the Senate should be part of the process.

The senator responded that when reading the Committee on Curricula reports a great deal of information is communicated that allows them to understand the reports and what's happening with courses and programs. The senator noted that while they understood that the committee hadn't planned on presenting the information in such a way, the report was essentially just a list of courses.

Senator Mosher responded that she hoped that the Senate would vote to affirm the report to show students that we stand behind the system that's been created. She added that the tags would appear in the MySlice system and students would be able to utilize them during the registration period for fall 2023. The tags will also appear in the university's online catalog. Senator Mosher reiterated that the motion affirms that the Senate played an important role in bringing the process to life.

Senator Thompson responded that because the course tags will be in the MySlice system, as well as the course catalog, students will be able to start to make more informed choices in the academic planning. Senator Thompson asked the senator if they were under the impression that the committee was asking senators to approve the individual tags. The senator responded that this was their initial impression.

Senator Mosher responded that the approval of the course tags had already been done by the committee. She stated that what the motion was asking senators to affirm that the Senate was involved in the process and that the Senate stands behind the tags.

Senator Thompson added that the motion is an affirmation that the committee followed procedure, which had already been approved by the Senate, for course submission and tagging.

Another senator raised a concern regarding the last phrase of the proposed motion. The senator highlighted that the motion states the Senate affirms that the tagging meets the set evaluation criteria. The senator stated that the Senate is in no position to do so. The senator suggested that if the motion were revised to say "The Senate affirms that the course tags have been reviewed by the Ad hoc Committee on Shared Competencies, which concluded that they meet set evaluation criteria," the problem would be alleviated.

The senator was concerned that the motion in its current form was asking the Senate to affirm something the Senate could not possibly affirm.

Senator Mosher asked the senator if they wanted to make an amendment to the motion. The senator responded that the simplest amendment would be to remove the last five words of the motion. Discussion followed regarding revisions to the motion.

The senator suggested the possible wording "The Senate affirms that the course tags listed in the December 2022 Senate Report have been reviewed by the Ad hoc Committee on Shared Competencies, which concluded that the tags meet set evaluation criteria".

Senators Thompson and Mosher agreed with the rewording. Senator Sam Gorovitz moved to approve the aforementioned revision to the motion. Senator Gabe Nugent seconded the motion to revise the original motion. The chair called for a hand vote to approve the proposed revision to the motion. The motion to revise the motion to be:

"The Senate affirms that the course tags listed in the December 2022 Senate Report have been reviewed by the Ad hoc Committee on Shared Competencies, which concluded that the tags meet set evaluation criteria".

The chair called for a vote on the revised motion. The vote was taken and the motion was approved.

The chair then moved on to the final agenda item. She noted that in light of recent discussions in the November Senate meeting, as well as recent violence on university campuses, the Agenda Committee reached out to Chief Craig Stone and Vice President of Student Experience, Rob Hradsky, who together co-chair the university's Threat Assessment Management Team. The chair invited the group to speak to the Senate. The chair noted that Chief Stone could not attend the meeting, but Deputy Chief John Sardino would present in Chief Stone's absence. The chair thanked VP Hradsky and Deputy Chief Sardino for presenting to the Senate.

Vice President Rob Hradsky began the presentation by sharing information about the team's threat assessment process.

The Threat Assessment Management Team (TAMT):

- Interdisciplinary group of trained professionals
- Evaluate potential threats to the campus community
- Develop strategies for intervening/mitigating identified threats
- Monitor potential threats until they are resolved
- Participate in regular training to ensure best practices in the area of threat identification and intervention/mitigation

Hradsky reviewed the core members of the TAMT:

- Rob Hradsky, VP Student Experience, Co-chair
- Craig Stone, AVP/Chief, Public Safety and Emergency Management, Co-chair
- Sheriah Dixon, Dean of Students
- Rick Smith, Lieutenant, DPS Investigations
- Carrie Brown, Director, Barnes Center Counseling
- Tyrone Reese, Director, Student Outreach
- Josh Rich, Interim Director, Community Standards
- Pam Peter, Title IX Investigator
- Abby Perer, Associate General Counsel, Advisor

The team will also invite other individuals who have knowledge or expertise in a particular situation. Hradsky gave the example of an employee situation, where an employee poses a threat, the team would invite Human Resources to join the team to provide background information and assist in the planning of an appropriate intervention. Others invited to work with team have included department chairs, faculty, people from Athletics and Disability Resources, as well as a number of other offices.

The TAMT Process

- Identification of University affiliate or non-affiliate engaging in behaviors that raise serious concern about their well-being, stability, or potential for violence or suicide.
- Initial screening and full inquiry, as warranted.
- Team develops and implements a plan to engage, manage and/or monitor the person or threat.
- Person or situation is monitored until concern is resolved.

Once a threat or concerning behavior by a member of our community is identified, which can come to the team in a number of ways, such as the Behavioral Consultation Committee in the Student Outreach Office, Human Resources or Faculty Affairs, or an online reporting form, the team would conduct an initial screening to better understand the issue. The team will do a criminal background check. The team will also scan social media and look at conduct history at the university. Based on what the team learns in the initial screening, they may open a full inquiry, which is a very structured process of evaluating the threat to the campus. The team has worked with Dr. Gene Geisinger.

Once the assessment is completed, there are a number of tools that the team can utilize. These include

- possibly removing the individual or individuals from our community
- required counseling
- other interventions to appropriately manage the threat

The team meets on a regular basis to follow up to make sure they're appropriately managing the threat. The team meets bi-weekly and as needed based on the situation.

Hradsky reviewed the ways that people can report a concern.

- Emergency: Department of Public Safety, 315-443-2224
- Non-Emergencies:
- TAMT Web Report Form
- Student Outreach/Dean of Students, 315-443-HELP
- Human Resources, 315-443-4042, option "1"
- Faculty Affairs, 315-443-5525
- Community Standards, 315-443-3728

The team goes through annual training. The next training opportunity is on March 10th, 2023 at Drumlins. Mr. Hradsky invited anyone interested in joining the training to do so in March. Training is also available to the campus community through Student Outreach and the Barnes Center do training with faculty and departments and other groups on campus to learn about how to identify individuals in distress, how to support them, and how to make appropriate referrals if there is potential risk.

Hradsky noted that Associate Provost Jamie Winders sent out information about a new online training called Cognito. He encouraged all faculty, staff, and students to complete the training. The training would help to identify those in distress. The software using role playing to help one think about how they might respond to an individual in distress and in turn get them support so it doesn't evolve into issues of self-harm or harm to others. The Threat Assessment website has more detailed information. At the conclusion of his remarks, Mr. Hradsky invited Deputy Chief John Sardino to provide some information regarding resources.

Chief John Sardino reviewed some of the resources that the team has at their disposal.

- Local
  - Syracuse University DPS
  - City of Syracuse Policy Dept
  - Town of DeWitt Police Dept
- County/State/Federal
  - Onondaga County Sheriff's Office
  - New York State Police
  - FBI Albany Field Office

The Syracuse University DPS will also reach out to other local law agencies to obtain information needed to make a full and accurate assessment.

DPS does annual active shooter training, as well as threat training (<https://alerrt.org/about>). The department is currently updating the Run.Hide.Fight safety video. The department has done nearly 50 presentations on the Run.Hide.Fight video, with over 3,000 attendees, just this semester. There is also the Orange Alert and Orange Safety app as a resource.

At the conclusion of the presentation Mr. Hradsky invited questions.

A senator noted that the presentation was very clear in covering many different kinds of threats, but the senator noted one situation that they didn't know how to classify. The senator described an instance where a former member of the community was sending disturbing messages communicating the sender was in some sort of distress and had some animosity for a member of the campus community. The senator stated that they didn't know how to determine if this would rise to the level of a threat or was simply the actions of someone in despair. The senator asked how such a situation should be dealt with.

Mr. Hradsky responded that any time someone has any concerns that there is a potential threat, whether it feels immediate or its unclear, he recommended that its passed along to the TAMT so they can make an assessment and determine how best to intervene should it evolve to involve the campus. Public Safety would do an assessment in the short-term, and other strategies would be employed should such an individual show up on campus.

The senator asked how best to report such an instance. Mr. Hradsky responded that an individual can report in whatever way is most comfortable for them, whether that be the website or a phone call. The important part is that they get the information.

Another senator shared that this was a very important resource to have on campus during these difficult times. The senator was concerned about how the process applies to those who are identified, meaning does it go in their job record that they were identified as a threat. The senator was concerned about identifying individuals who turn out not to be a threat, and they asked if there were ways of protecting and/or supporting them.

Mr. Hradsky thanked the senator for their question and responded that the work of the team is confidential. The team will involve individuals who are close to a particular situation so the team can effectively assess what's happening and deploy interventions, but the work is confidential. It isn't connected to employee files and are considered confidential records.

The senator asked if there was any support given to the person being reviewed. Mr. Hradsky responded that they provide support to the subject of the review, as well as any particular targets. The team often works with all parties, providing safety planning and necessary support, which can take many different forms depending on the nature of the issue. The team is actively engaged with all parties involved so both subjects and targets are aware of the proceedings.

Another senator thanked the presenters for the important work. They noted that there may be an overlap between acute mental health crises and the team's sample caseload. The senator asked if there was involvement or leadership with on campus psychologists or mental health experts in the initial assessment process.

Mr. Hradsky responded that one of the members of the team is the director of the Barnes Center Counseling Unit and the director is a psychologist, which helps with the assessment. He noted that occasionally the team may involve outside experts if they feel they don't have the expertise needed to adequately address the situation.

Another senator asked if a situation arose that involved a member of a bargaining unit, would there be a reach out to leadership from the bargaining unit for representation.

Mr. Hradsky responded that when they have a situation involving an employee, particularly a staff member, the team works directly with Human Resources. The team works with Denise Dice, who oversees all employee contracts, which helps makes sure that the team is not only keeping the campus safe, but also following all of the rules of the union.

The chair asked a question for a senator asking if there was a plan to update the signs in the community that list the information for the old safety app. Deputy Chief Sardino responded that the team is working on that and they should be updated very soon.

A senator asked about the availability of active shooter training. Deputy Chief Sardino responded that anyone interested in the training can contact the deputy chief directly and he would set them up for training. The training is conducted in groups from five to 55.

At the conclusion of questions, the chair thanked Vice President Hradsky and Deputy Chief Sardino for their work and for presenting the vital information to the Senate.

The chair asked if there was any old business. As there was none, the chair asked if there was any new business. As there was none, the chair wished everyone a wonderful and restful break.

The meeting was adjourned at 5:07 pm
